

“It is a wonder that curiosity survives the education today. Everybody is stuck somewhere between the common childhood fascination of refrigerator lights turning off and adulthood anxiety of sustaining the world. And maybe this is why it has always been the little ones who have amused the grown-ups by showing them the things they could have never seen.”